

The Robinson Family Legacy at St. Augustine's College

The Robinson family has a deep-rooted connection with St. Augustine's College, shaped by a strong belief in education and a devout Roman Catholic and Anglican background. George Robinson Sr., a successful businessman, understood the value of learning and instilled this belief in his children.

The legacy began with Violet Rodgers (nee Robinson), who attended Xavier's, the sister school to St. Augustine's College. George Robinson Jr. (Sweetboy) was the first family member to graduate in 1970 under the guidance of Father Bonaventure Dean and Father Burton Bloom. He ignored the noise in the market to complete his studies as SAC was an all-boys high school at the time and was followed by his younger brother Eugene Robinson, class of 1971. Veronica Robinson, class of 1974, became the first female family member to graduate, paving the way for Jacquelyn Robinson and Loretta Thomas (nee Robinson) in 1977, the year the school transitioned from form-based classes to grades.

SAC instilled in our family the importance of being punctual, organized, and competitive. SAC became the staple school of choice to receive the best tertiary education for our family. Throughout the years, numerous family members continued to enroll at "The Big Red Machine." The Robinsons have seen a diverse array of professionals and entrepreneurs emerge from the college, including restaurant and bar owners, musicians, videographers, photographers, educators, bookstore owners, chefs, physical fitness trainers, doctors, lawyers, IT professionals, nurses, and café owners.

The Robinsons are known for their clannish bond as there was always a group enrolled in each grade level. When you see one you are always asked what is your relationship to which Robinson.

To the current members of the Robinson family enrolled at St. Augustine's College, the legacy lives on in your hands. Embrace the education, values, and opportunities the school offers, and continue to shine brightly as torchbearers of the Robinson family legacy.
